In China an honest official is a rara avis, and is so regarded by as large undertakings which require the application of the joint stock principle necessarily come more or less directly under official control, they are not looked upon with favour by the people. Thus the Tientsin ment Works at Woolwich. correspondent of the N. C. Daily News, writing with reference to certain coal mines promoted by the Seventh Prince, says, " The Chinese will not take shares in any enterprise here which has not the guarantee of foreigners," and that " no Chinaman in his senses would invest in an undertaking in which the only persons interested were Chinese mandarins." That these statements are accurate no one who knows anything of officialdom in China will for a moment doubt, but what a commentary they are on the purity of the Administration.

He frequently receives a fatted ape from his subjects as a present, and nothing is more acceptable. Amongst other strange food served up at his table are the humps of camels, the fins of sharks, The latter are eaten alive. His manner of daily life is said to be more luxurious than that of his overlord, the Emperor of China.

The following remarks on Chinese poisons are taken from Nature:-"The commencet poisons are said to be opium, arsenic, and certais noxious essences derived from herbs. But bosides these, other things are taken by suicides and given by murderers to cause death. In some of the southern provinces there exists a particular kind of silkworm, known as the golden silkworm, which is reared by missreants to serve either purpose as occasion may require. Quicksilver, which is also used with fatal effect, is either swallowed, or, like the "juice of cursed hebenon" which sent Hamlet's father to his account, is ponred into the ear. The torture necessarily of these gentry, a hundred or more consequent on this last method of using it must be so excessive that it may safely be assumed that it finds favour only with murderers. Swellowing gold, on the other hand, seems to be the favourite way of seeking death with wealthy the expression 'swallowing gold' is but a metaphorical phrase meaning swillowing Captain Peterson, of the British steamer Rosa. | poison, just as when a notable outprit is ordered to strangle himself he is said to have had a notually swallowed, and it prescribes the remedies which should be adopted to effect a cure. I pleasure that persons are being proscented for fishing with dynamite. None The Amateur Concert at the City Hall last | but a person of the most mean and sordid disposition would try to enrich himself by inlucing poor Chiuese dishermen to buy the explosive from him for such a purpose. I know, however, of one small store keeper who has acted thus and feel very much inclined to gibbethim in these columns The report of the Tanjong Pagar Dook Co., for his avarice and greed of gain. He pennaded a young Chinese boy to purchase this powerful engine of destruction, together with detenators, fuses, and what he called a "primer," that is, t diminutive cartridge into which to place the detonator and fore. The use of this small cartridge is to diminish the danger attending a premature explosion of the detonator, from which, when a full sized cartridge has been used, the mos serious results have ensued. The cause of these premature explosions is invariably the use of too much power when forcing the fase into the detopater. The fuse must necessarily fit somewhat tightly into the large percussion cap called a detonator, or it (the fuse) would come out and the dynamite fail to explode. These detonators centain a mixture of chlorate of potassa and tersulphide of autimony, together with fulminating mercury and powdered glass. The mixture is preserved from damp by some moisture-resisting varnish. In the case of the Chinese boy hove mentioned luckily no serious catastrophe resulted, but this was simply overted by his having placed the fase too far into this packet Ng, on the 26th inst. of dynamite, which, on being thrown overboard. floated up under the boat's storn, and having been fired by the frue before the latter had Cox's mat bungalow at Taim tsa-tsni by out burnt down to the detonator, a considerable portion of the dynamite burned away hamlessly Enough, however, was left, when the explosion finally took place, to damage the rudder and stern of the boat very considerably, besides thereoghly

The incident brings to my recilection an affair in its loading incidents somewhat similar which took place at Canton on the Honam side about eight or nine years ago, at the res dence of a well known-gentleman whose name for obvious reasons I am obliged to withhold The back entrance to this gentleman's mansion was through an alleyway some one hundred yards long by two broad, flanked on other side by the houge of wealthy Chinese merchants, and when the, by moneyed Chinese well renembered, incursion of travelling boggas took place at Canton some years ego, a horde number, honogred the foreign gen lemin above mentioned with a visit. Cyprus has just passed through the crisis of its first general election. The island is divided into three electoral districts, each remaing one Moslem and three non-Moslems. The wast majority of the latter are Christians, but they include in addition one freethinker, not to mention 69 Jews and 22 gipsies. The franchise is as wide as possible, but many electors have failed to main place on the register through laxity in paying their taxes. In two districts the Moslems returned their man unopposed, but in the third, the capital, three of the Faithful contested one seat. The Christians were, of course, keener in the matter than their more sedate countrymen. and 20 candidates contested the nine seats. About half the registered electors polled. The members chosen are mostly merchants, lawyers, and proprietors, but a bishop has been elected in two districts. The United Kingdom has evidently much to learn from this interesting island. If our own bishops desire to take part in legislaof Kitium, and seek the suffrages of their fellow- of 25 % countrymen as a passport to the Senate. In another point also the Cypriots are ahead of us -namely, in that the necessary expense of that of the candidates. All accounts testify that the ill-feeling between Greeks and Einglish, of which there were some signs at one time, has disappeared, and that all parties are working together for the good of the island, which is making slow but satisfactory progress. Mr. Watson, an Englishman, has been elected Mayor animous choice of Turks and Greeks. The law Courts have been purified and reorganised, the Cadis being relegated to their ecolesiastical fanctions. Each Court has now an English president
